Accounts, signing in, profile and notifications

1. What this is

How you create an AlgoJob account, get into it, keep your profile current, and receive notifications. Each type of user signs in at a different place.

2. Who this applies to Everyone. Sign-in pages are separate per role and they are not interchangeable.

You are a	Sign in at
Candidate / student	/user/login or /student/login
Recruiter (AlgoHR)	/company/login
College admin	/college/login
University admin	/university-login

A candidate account cannot sign in to the recruiter portal, and vice versa. "Invalid credentials" on the wrong portal is the single most common sign-in problem.

3. Names and terms

A user might say	Meaning
OTP, code, verification code	the one-time code sent to your phone
social login, Google login	signing in with Google
claim my profile	taking ownership of an account a recruiter created for you
session expired, logged out	your sign-in has timed out

4. How to sign up and sign in

Candidates

Three ways to sign in: 1. Phone number and OTP, with a password set on your account. 2. Email and password. 3. Sign in with Google.

To sign up: go to `/user/signup`, choose email or phone, verify with the code sent to you, and set a password. Signing up earns you 25 XP, and completing your profile earns 100 XP.

Forgot your password: use `/user/forgot-password`. You will be sent a code to verify, then you can set a new one.

Recruiters

Sign up at `/company/signup`, sign in at `/company/login`. Password reset is at `/company/forgot-password`.

College and university admins

Accounts are created for you by AlgoJob — there is no self-signup. You sign in with the credentials you were given and set your own password at first sign-in.

5. Sessions

- You stay signed in for a while and are then asked to sign in again. Signing in on a new device does not sign you out of the old one.
- Sign out from the account menu, especially on a shared computer.
- If you are signed out mid-session unexpectedly, sign back in — your progress and reports are saved on your account, not in the browser.

6. Your profile

Your profile drives more than it looks like:

- Your resume is read by the AI interviewer to ask questions relevant to your experience. An empty or outdated resume produces a generic interview.
- Your branch and subject determine which Mock Debug curriculum you follow.
- Your college determines which college leaderboard you appear on.
- Completing your profile is a one-time 100 XP.

Upload your resume as a PDF or Word document; the details are read out of it automatically and you can correct anything it got wrong.

7. Claiming a profile

If a recruiter added you to their system before you had an account, you will get a link to claim your profile. Following it lets you set a password and take ownership of the account, keeping anything already on it. Claim links are single-use.

8. Notifications

- In-app notifications appear in the notifications area and arrive in real time — you do not need to refresh. They cover reports being ready, level-ups, and account events.
- Email is used for account and transactional messages.
- Notifications are kept for a period and then cleared automatically.

9. When things go wrong

"Invalid credentials" when the password is definitely right

Check you are on the correct sign-in page for your role. A candidate account will not sign in at `/company/login` .

"I did not get my OTP"

Check the number is correct and has signal, and wait a moment before requesting another. If several attempts produce nothing, sign in with email and password or with Google instead, and contact support.

"I signed up with Google but now cannot sign in with a password"

If you created your account with Google, keep using Sign in with Google. Use the forgot-password flow to set a password if you want both.

"I have two accounts"

Signing up with a phone number and separately with Google can create two separate accounts. Contact support to have them merged — do not keep using both, or your XP and reports will be split.

"I get signed out constantly"

Usually blocked cookies or private browsing. Allow cookies for the site and avoid private windows for long sessions.

"My resume details are wrong"

Details are read out of the file automatically and it does not always get everything right. Edit them directly in your profile — the corrected version is what the AI interviewer uses.

"My claim-profile link does not work"

Claim links are single-use and can expire. Ask the recruiter to resend it, or contact support.

"I am on the wrong college leaderboard"

Correct your college in your profile. If your college is not listed, contact support.

"I want to delete my account"

Contact support — this is not self-service.

10. Common questions

Can I change my registered phone number or email? Update it in account settings. If you are locked out of both, contact support.

Can I use one account on my laptop and my phone? Yes. Signing in on a second device does not sign you out of the first.

Do I need to upload a resume? For AI interviews, effectively yes — the interviewer builds its questions from it. For the arenas, no.

Is my resume shown to recruiters? Recruiters you apply to or who scheduled an interview for you see your profile. Your practice reports are yours.

Can a recruiter account also practise? No. The portals are separate accounts with separate purposes.

Why do I need to give my college? It places you on your college leaderboard and lets your college see aggregate progress.

Can I change my password? Yes, in account settings, or through the forgot-password flow.

11. What this does not do

- There is no self-signup for college or university admin accounts.
- Accounts cannot be switched between roles.
- Accounts cannot be deleted from within the app.
- There is no offline or mobile-app sign-in — the platform is web only.

12. When to contact support

- Duplicate accounts that need merging.
- Account deletion.
- Locked out of both your registered phone and email.
- A college that does not appear in the list.
- A claim-profile link that will not work after the recruiter resends it.
